

Mid-Project Evaluation

Jorge A Hernandez

Since we already discussed our status of the project with you in Week 12 office hours, I will keep this evaluation brief. As you may know, we have conducted two pilot studies based on two different sources, one being friends of Hao and the other participants from Mechanical Turk. Based on the two studies, we were getting different observed outcomes and power readings. From the feedback we received, we will be going with the values calculated from the Mturk pilot study since our main study will be ran there. We will also be enabling filtering for the next batch of participants hoping it may give us better readings this time around.

Based on the calculations from the Mturk study, we will need around 750 participants per group to have a significant reading. Therefore we will try to get as much participants as possible within the next two weeks. Other than that I don't see any issues with the group, everyone is putting in effort. Javed has done a fantastic job with the website for the survey, I can not stress that enough! It works perfectly in capturing what we need to conduct the study.
